

ENGLISH LITERATURE

Course content

We follow the AQA A Level English Literature A specification. This course offers clear progression from GCSE.

The AQA English Literature A Level enables students to study literature through the lens of historicism, encouraging the independent study of a range of texts within a shared context, for example 'Modern Times: Literature from 1945 to present'. This unifying approach facilitates the inclusion of a range of wider reading, thus extending students' experience and appreciation of literature.

The variety of assessment styles used, such as passage-based questions, unseen material, single-text questions, multiple-text questions, open and closed book approaches, allows students to develop a wide range of skills: the ability to read critically, analyse, evaluate and undertake independent research which are valuable for both further study and future employment.

Why study English Literature at A Level?

Students who opt to continue their study of English Literature at A Level do so with a diverse range of A Level subjects such as History, Politics, Graphics, Drama, Languages, Sciences and Mathematics.

As well as developing a knowledge, love and appreciation of literature and an understanding and empathy of different social, cultural and historical contexts, English Literature develops the skills of critical reading, analysis, evaluation and communication- such as the ability to construct a sophisticated written argument using precise and accurate written expression.

A Level English Literature is an academically challenging qualification and the desirability of the skills that this subject develops means that an A Level in English Literature is highly regarded by employers and by universities for all undergraduate courses.
